OVERLOOKING COMFORTS: BAL-ANCE OUTGO WITH IN-COME.

If you read the daily papers closely you've noticed within the past few weeks where Hugo Stinnes, of Germany, died and left the largest fortune in Europe. You also read about the same time where a miner, found dead in the slums of San Francisco, had $15,000 in bills sewed inside his undershirt. And when you consider the two instance together you can't help wondering just what pleasure a man gets out of hoarding. Any man in Bay St. Louis, or elsewhere, who is making as little as $25 a week is happier than Stinnes ever was with his millions, and a man who has friends to smile and speak to is richer than the miser whose lonely body rests in a grave that was never wet by tears.

Prosperity doesn't lie in the possession of money. To the man who regulates his life properly, every dollar that is saved stands for some pleasure that he will later on derive from it in his own behalf or that of his family and friends. Just why a man who calls himself a good business man should endure privations and rob himself of luxuries and comforts he really craves, is past understanding. Possibly in his greed for more dollars he has really forgotten about the comforts they will buy,

The good business man does not watch the future to the neglect of the present; nor does he think so much about today that he makes no provision for tomorrow. The wise each day and keeps an eye and a few dollars for the future. And he knows that there isn't going to be any pockets in his shroud.

THOSE OLD GARDEN JOKES tention. SHOULD BE TABOOED.

Along about this season we read a good many jokes printed at the expense of the garden and flower seed package. Jokesmiths of the country would have us believe that the red beet printed on the front of the little envelope is no relation whatever to the beet inside. They would also have us believe—if we took their jokes seriously—that until the frost withers the plant the gardner may not know what sort of a child the seedlets have been parents of.

But the truth is, if there's a man in Bay St. Louis who has ever planted seed from these envelops and has been baffled with the result he is one in a million who have not. You can count on radishes coming from a package so labeled, and even congressional seed, for years the brunt of supply and demand was passed by the thousands of jokes, generally brings other party. forth what is promised on the printed side of the package. The fellow of oil in Washington—and that who plants a garden goes right on en- turmoil. joying his string beans and sweet corn fresh from the back lot, while the man who writes jokes about him wife's birthday by forgets which on buys his grub at a restaurant—and it is. nine times out of ten gets it out of a can.

Don't let the jokesmith discourage you. If you've a few feet of ground it ought to be working for you and saving you good money a little later on in the shape of reduced grocery bills. Don't stop to figure the cost in sweat or a lame back, unless you want to credit the garden with also furnishing you with a lot of healthful outdoor exercise. There's but one way to look at a garden—and that is as the best investment a man can make next to owning the house alongside it. And even the men who make jokes about it have sense enough to know that.

On Monday morning the N. O. Times-Picayute reported that the 'Rock-a-Chaws are chewed up by the Moons".....Moon propaganda. Three sufficiently, Sharkey announced his hits by the men, the majority of willingness to meet Ross in a return whom played on league teams, coupled with a series of errors, giving them a total of four runs, certainly the accident and anyone could see is far from canabalistic. True, the Rock-a-Chaws: failed to make their six hits count for runs, but the fact remains that the visitors are a very lucky bunch of ball tossers to have otten away with the game.

The Piretto Moons won the champonship of the Dixie League this past winter with seven straight games in son met Young Kurns, of Biloxi, for the winning column, against the best of the "semi-"ro" talent. Since then they have resistered eleven winning represented their line-up: The Texas Leagur and the Cotton States. school boys, the oldest under nineteen years, and crow about it. > In gratitude to the Sisters of St Joseph for the good work they have always done and are continuing to do in this parish, the members of the Catholic Neighborhood Circles are arranging to give an entertainment on 'he Convent grounds, on Saturday,

This May festival will begin at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. There will be a very attractive and unusual program carried out during the evening. A greater part of the program will be kept as a "surprise" until the occasion, but sufficient details will be made public at a later date, to enable those who will patronize the affair to know that a big treat is in store for them. Anticipation is a great thing, but in this case the entertainment committee promise that the realization will be even better. The following ladies have the May festival in charge:
